

A black and white photograph of the Teatro Regio in Parma, Italy. The image captures the vast, semi-circular tiered seating (cavea) from a high vantage point, looking down towards the stage. The stage is a large, rectangular platform with a prominent architectural structure at its rear, featuring a central entrance and flanking wings. The entire theater is nestled within a lush, wooded landscape, with a dense line of trees forming a natural backdrop. In the distance, a small building with a dome is visible through the trees. The foreground shows the top edges of the nearest rows of seats, emphasizing the scale of the theater.
